

Population Density by Census Tracts

Census data are aggregated to three different levels of spatial resolution: 1) the Census Tract; 2) the Census Block Group; and 3) the Census Block. In the following three maps, the same data - population density - is depicted with these three different spatial entities. In this map by Census Tracts, the highest population densities are found between I-480 and 50th Street, an area dominated by apartments and closely spaced houses that combine to create the highest population density for the city. Isolated areas of higher population density are found west of 84th Street that are also characterized by apartments.

Number of Residents per Sq. Mile

