

Population Density by Census Block Groups

The population density map by Census Block Group, a smaller spatial division, shows more isolated areas of high population density. High areas in western Omaha become more evident as the higher population densities caused by apartments are not as diluted by surrounding single-family housing. Low population densities predominate in industrial areas north of L Street and in the northern parts of the city that have yet to be developed.

Number of Residents per Sq. Mile

