The U.S. Census Bureau defines households as families living together who are related by birth, marriage or adoption. It also refers to single persons living in shared housing. The largest number of households per census tract are located in central Omaha, flanking Dodge St./West Dodge Road, the area along 50th Street from Blondo to L, and census tracts with apartments along the southern border of the city.

West and south-west parts of Omaha appear to have the largest average household size. A few areas in North and particularly South Omaha also boast large average household sizes. These areas correspond to parts of the city with more children.
